MARGARET RIVER

Located in the heart of the Wilyabrup Valley - the premier sub-region of Western Australia's Margaret River - where the first vines were planted and the great tradition of Margaret River wine began, Hay Shed Hill is part of a small and prestigious group of pioneer vineyards that have established Margaret River as a world-class wine producing region.

The Hay Shed Hill vineyard is situated on a picturesque property that was established as a dairy farm as part of the group settlement scheme for returned soldiers from the First World War.

Vines were first planted in 1973 under the guidance of Dr Kevin Cullen when the property was known as Sussex Vale. In the late 1980's the vineyard was bought by Morrison Family. As the old hay shed from the dairy days was a local landmark, the Morrison's used this to create the new name for the property, Hay Shed Hill. Hay making tools found in the hay shed provided them with the inspiration for Hay Shed's sister label – Pitchfork Wines.

MARGARET RIVER

MAP OF MARGARET RIVER
WINE REGION

MAP OF AUSTRALIA

The Margaret River Wine Region is located in the far south west corner of Western Australia and is one of the most geographically isolated and pure wine regions in the world.

The region has a maritime climate and a marked Mediterranean climate in terms of rainfall whose seasonal consistency has allowed Margaret River wine’s international reputation to flourish.

Wines from the Margaret River region are of superior growing conditions that are seasonally consistent with a Mediterranean style climate. This means vineyards are not affected by extreme summer and winter temperatures. Humidity levels are ideal during the growing period and the combination of climate, soil and viticulture practices leads to consistently high quality fruit of intense flavour. Consequently annual vintage results continue to exceed expectations and reinforce its reputation of one of the premium wine producing regions of the world.

“The Hay Shed Hill vineyard is a rare gem of a site. The right slopes with the right soil, and it was planted back in 1973 so we have the advantage of working with truly mature vines...”

Winemaker Michael Kerrigan

MICHAEL KERRIGAN

WINEMAKER + OWNER

30+ years' experience puts Michael amongst the best winemakers in the country. He's able to see and fulfil the potential of the fruits of this property's old vines. His genuine enthusiasm for his craft and of course his incredible talent to ensure Hay Shed Hill continues to cement its place as one of the finest wineries in the country.

“Only a great vineyard site in a classic wine growing region can make world class wines. It is all about the vineyard” Michael Kerrigan, winemaker.
